

Go-Go to Glory: The 1959 White Sox fetes A.L. champions on 50th anniversary

The 1959 White Sox broke a 40-year pennant drought on the city's South Side. The scrappy Go-Go Sox, with pitching, fielding and timely hitting, finally overcame the New York Yankees' dominance of the American League, only to lose to the Dodgers in the World Series.

On the 50th anniversary of the pennant-winning club, the book Go-Go to Glory: The 1959 Chicago White Sox pays tribute to the men of that team. Published by ACTA Sports, the volume is a Society for American Baseball Research (SABR) project and includes original biographies of all the players, coaches, broadcasters and key front-office personnel, and appreciations of the 1950s White Sox by fans and historians.

A number of other books on White Sox history cover a much wider scope than the 1959 club, but they do not have the biographical focus that this one features. The in-depth project gathers the collective efforts of more than 40 SABR members and friends of this nonprofit research society.

More information can be obtained at www.actasports.com or 773-271-1030.